

MEET CHIP . . .

Chip Lowe, senior in Buchholz's Academy of Entrepreneurship in Gainesville, Florida, has gained skills throughout his four-year progression in the Academy. From learning to write a business plan freshmen year, to working with over 20 businesses to build and maintain their websites currently in his senior year, under his developing website company, CWD, the courses and real-life scenarios stimulated in the classroom have played an important role in his development of his company, business procedures, and partnerships he's developed in the local community. There is no question that entrepreneurship education is an instrumental key to success for students entering the work force in any field.

Chip has been a major asset to the Consortium from the summer before his junior year when he redesigned the website that the Consortium provides for entrepreneurship educators <http://www.entre-ed.org> . Since then he has created the website for Future CEO Stars, the Consortium's student magazine and designed the program for making the magazine available in a FREE electronic version. <http://www.fcsmag.com>

Next he designed a new website for the Youth Entrepreneurship Alliance, a group of national organizations that work together to maximize the impact of entrepreneurship education at the national level. <http://www.YEAleaders.org> Recently Chip provided a whole new look for the National Entrepreneurship Week website <http://entre-week.org> He has helped the Consortium have a presence on Facebook, Twitter, and YouTube. In the process of all this design work Chip has become a member of the Consortium staff, providing technical assistance and the viewpoint of our students for the staff while also completing his senior year of high school. In his spare time you can find him in a chicken suit with his promotion job for Chick fil-A in Gainesville, FL !
